| Bible prophecy Is unique. The Bible is the only book that challenges            |
| by foretelling the, staking its   |
| on the ultimate, certain, and complete fulfillment of its detailed pre-         |
| dictions. It has been said that some Old Testament predictions                  |
| were literally fulfilled at Christ's first coming, and that of the 845 Old      |
| Testament quotations that are found in the New Testament, 333 refer to          |
| Christ. Some 25 prophecies uttered by various prophets over a period of         |
| some years concern the betrayal, trial, death, burial, and                      |
| resurrection of Jesus. These were literally fulfilled, although the chances     |
| against such fulfillment have been shown to be chance in                        |
| 33,554,438 If the law of compound probabilities is applied similarly to all     |
| 109 predictions fulfilled at Christ's first coming, the chances that they could |
| accidentally be fulfilled in the history of one person is one in                |
| The appearance of a prophet was always a sign that and                          |
| were predominant in Israel. The prophets raised their                           |
| voices in protest against the idolatry,, and blindness of                       |
| their times, calling the nation back to God.                                    |
| It is a mistake to think that a prophet's primary function was to foretell the  |
| . The prophet did that, of course, but he was first of all a                    |
| man with a message from God for his generation, a                               |
| "forthteller" rather than a "foreteller." Often the prophets were statesmen     |
| with both insight and foresight, clearly seeing the end result of the           |
| dangerous religious and political experiments of their contemporaries. The      |
| prophets often did not understand some of their own utterances, for the         |
| burdens they delivered sometimes had a fulfillment: an initial and partial      |
| fulfillment close to the time the words were uttered, and a later, more         |
| complete fulfillment, at a remote date.   |
| They usually spoke from the standpoint of their own people, with the            |
| Gentiles being mentioned only to the extent that those other nations would      |
| come into conflict with, or blessing through, Israel. The themes of the         |
| prophets were many and varied, but apart from the initial, immediate, and       |
| partial fulfillment of their predictions, their prophecies focused on two       |
| future events: the first () and second  |
| () comings of Christ. The prophets  | themselves probably could not distinguish between these two comings, and often, too, a message would be given, only to be enlarged upon at a later date by either the same prophet or by another.

Three of the prophets directed their messages to Gentile nations: Obadiah, Jonah, and Nahum—the first to Edom and the other two to Nineveh.

It often happened that the prophet was _____ with the people to whom he delivered the message of God, and sometimes he was bitterly persecuted for his preaching, his message being considered subversive to the national interest, and the prophet himself a traitor. The prophets were the moral conscience of their age.
